The Museum of Illusions in Dallas' West End

Dallas has a new museum, and it's one that will make your head spin. The Museum of Illusions, an interactive museum focusing on "edutainment," opened its first Texas location in downtown Dallas on December 7.

The museum features more than 60 exhibits and installations designed to offer an insight into how the brain perceives things. It uses illusions to teach visitors about vision, perception, the human brain, and science, making it easier to understand why the eyes can see things that the brain cannot explain. It includes such photogenic exhibits as a vortex tunnel, reverse room, tilted room, infinity room, a Beuchet chair, and more.

Open every day from 10 am to 8 pm, the museum costs $19 for adults, $17 for students or military with valid ID, and $15 for children ages 5-12; kids 4 and under are free.

There is also a family four-pack available for $62, saving $6 for a family with two parents and two kids. The museum is located at 701 Ross Ave. The Museum of Illusions can also be booked for private and corporate events, as well as school excursions across all grade levels.

SEASON SPECIAL TEEN SCENE PLAYERS PRESENT ANDI BOI

FEBRUARY 7-16, 2020

As more and more young people are coming to terms with gender identity and transitioning, there is a need for resources that can encourage conversation and understanding in a safe and open environment. Dallas Children's Theater is pleased to add this topic to its series of internationally-recognized teen issue plays. Andi is a transgender teen entering his first day of school identifying as a male. Former classmates recall his last name when they hear it, but there is something different about Andi that keeps the dots from connecting clearly in their minds. Soon his new teachers, classmates, and his classmates' parents will figure it out. How will they react? With aggression? With compassion? With confusion? Inspired by one teen's journey, ANDI BOI is told with a sensitivity towards Andi and uses wit, heart, and warmth to help audiences find their way to greater compassion and awareness. Post-show conversations with subject matter resources will follow every performance.

Inspired by one teen's journey, this play is not attempting to represent the spectrum of scenarios that are going on in the transgender community, but rather to pave a way to start conversation and foster awareness and understanding.

Created especially for ages 13 and up and those who love them. (Contains adult language.)

Great Escapism with Dreamscape at Northpark Center

Take a deep-sea dive, hunt for a pearl in an ancient temple, and mingle with alien creatures at Dreamscape at AMC, the thrilling new virtual reality theater at NorthPark. Only the second Dreamscape in the nation, the theater offers uniquely immersive 360-degree experiences set within scripted stories.

Guests walk or ride through each virtual realm and even interact with it in the three shows: "Alien Zoo," "Curse of the Lost Pearl," and "The Blu: Deep Rescue." For instance, you might choose to touch an alien creature or pop colorful bubbles floating by in "Alien Zoo."

Anyone who is at least 10 years old or four-feet tall can buy a $20 ticket and suit up in the company's proprietary gear: body-mapping sensors for hands and feet, an 11-pound backpack of electronics and a virtual reality headset for sight and sound.

A maximum of six people experience each showing. Two attendants teach you how to don the equipment, and they stick around, invisibly, in case anyone needs assistance during the 10- to 15-minute virtual reality experience. Guests can always see each other and interact in the virtual realm, each appearing as the avatar they that selected during registration.

You'll look appropriately dressed for each respective voyage without changing a stitch of clothing. In "The Blu: Deep Rescue," for example, everyone appears in scuba suits and gloves during the mission to free a trapped baby blue whale.

Dallas Skyline Basketball Kicks Off Inaugural Season

Are you ready for high-flying professional basketball in Addison? Dallas Skyline is getting ready to kick off their inaugural season bringing to Addison, its first professional basketball team.

For the home opener on February 2, Skyline is planning to give its fans an absolute treat! They will face already established rivals Lewisville Yellowjackets. Expect this game to be a fast-paced, high-flying game. The team's dance team will get the crowd into the game and there will be some other surprises for fans to enjoy.

One of the key players to look for on the court as fans get familiar with the team are Skyline's Point Guard Charlie Shorter. A bonified scorer, Shorter is also fun to watch and is sure to be a fan favorite. For those who follow the Big 12 Conference, you will recognize a couple of players: TJ Maston from Baylor and Aaron Ross from Texas Tech will be in the front court.

Dallas Skyline is part of The Basketball League, which has 19 teams and is on the playing level of the NBA's G-League. An important part of the basketball world, The Basketball League gives players who do not make an NBA roster an opportunity to play in the U.S. instead of going overseas.
